D4/win-xp-pro

Since a month or so the workplace that beta-tests my program almost once every day experiences an error

'The window does not have scroll bars..'

It occurs at every workstation and with creation of all different forms. It seems completely random. The complete error message is listed below.

The error might suggest a resource problem or handle problem. First I thought these type of errors should be rare in winxpro. Second running my program through memproof doesn't suggest leakage of any pointer. Third I am very careful to free and nil anything I create.

Also I'd like to know how I could measure resource usage in windows-xp.

I've browsed newsgroup histories for this problem but found nothing useful.

Since all forms seem to be able to get affected it must be some kind of general problem, but what?

Can you have too many components on your forms? Can your program be too big?

How can I find a solution to this?
