Hi Ingvar, I don't exactly understand your question. Do you mean that how can one restore a partition from a bootable CD if that application requires .NET?

Well, as incredible as may seem, Ghost 2005 is supposed to restore your boot partition while Windows is running (I haven't tested that, but people say that it works). But just in case, the Ghost 2005 CD is bootable and comes with a Windows Preinstallation Environment (which takes ages to load), that perhaps comes with .NET integrated. What is hilarious is that Ghost 2005 CANNOT create images when booting from the CD (for example, do you want to image your perfectly clean

Re: Does anyone use .NET applications?

Windows installation? You can't. You must first install .NET, then Ghost 2005 and then make the image from inside Windows).
