Too true. I've just been forced to set up a new system after my main development box blew its capacitors (although replacements came in today, so I'll see if I can salvage it). I'm setting up Delphi on this new box, obviously, but I'm also installing VS2005 and will start seriously playing with .NET in the next few days. I've resisted the urge for some time now, but I think it's time to at get at least one foot back into the Microsoft camp – just in case.
