For one of my applications I write and read some data to / from a CSV file with a simple routine based on a text file and some string separation functions. Now I want to replace the CSV file by a XML file. Is there a good and simple XML component around, free if possible, which I can use easily without having to change too much of my existing code? Probably a parser for reading would do, because it wouldn't be too hard to code my own routine to write the XML file.
