

Re: How to choose a firmware partner

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/General/comp.arch.embedded/2004-06/0177.html>

From: Steve at fivetrees (steve_at_NOSPAMTAfivetrees.com)

Date: 06/03/04

Date: Thu, 3 Jun 2004 13:12:09 +0100

<robin.pain@tesco.net> wrote in message
news:bd24a397.0406022345.42dfad7b@posting.google.com...

>

> No, I do read data sheets but I have a small attention span and a bad > memory so I expect to make mistakes.

Remind me not to hire you ;).

> *I think the sheer dullness and difficulty
> (impossibility) of optimising the placement of the wdt_resets > (ignoring future maintainability horror) will likely lead to wholesale > sloppiness sooner to later and aggressive management or timescale > pressure will guarrantee it.*

Errr... see my earlier post. There is no "dullness" or "horror" involved in kicking watchdogs – one just has to be methodical. And since being methodical is the name of this particular game (embedded design), I can't help but wonder whether you've chosen the right career.

Steve

<http://www.sfdesign.co.uk>

<http://www.fivetrees.com>