

Re: Embedded Software Engineers, needed in Seattle

---

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/General/comp.arch.embedded/2007-01/msg00494.html>

---

- From: CBFalconer <cbfalconer@xxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Wed, 10 Jan 2007 05:34:13 -0500
-

Tom Lucas wrote:

"CBFalconer" <cbfalconer@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message

Tom Lucas wrote:

"rickman" <gnuarm@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message

<snip>

I actually don't know why some newsgroups get inundated with SPAM and others don't. But I don't think it is a good idea to welcome any sort of commercial posting to this newsgroup, and that includes job announcements. There are groups just for that, why do we need them here where many of us don't want to see them?

Which groups are for job announcements? I've never found one that would cover the sort of jobs that would be of interest to the posters in this group.

Go to the 'subscribe' or equivalent in your newsreader, and search for the word 'jobs' in the newsgroup name. You will probably find at least hundreds. Most are probably useless.

A better bet is probably your state employment office (USA centric), which usually maintains some pages with current job openings listed and a method of getting your offering listed.

Re: Embedded Software Engineers, needed in Seattle

Well it certainly brings up a lot of listings but it would be hard to know where to start looking for embedded jobs, particularly for a newbie who might not know specifically what they were looking for.

I think most people are ware of the standard methods of checking the Job Centre/State Employment Office and the various internet advertisers (jobsite/monster etc) but it would be nice if there was an agreeable method of making