

Re: How do you get a JVM to work with WinXP SP1 + IE6.0 SP1?

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/Java/comp.lang.java.help/2004-03/0874.html>

From: Phil Holland (postmaster_at_hollandnumerics.co.uk)

Date: 03/16/04

Date: Tue, 16 Mar 2004 21:33:12 +0000

In article <Oo2dnUayodMj98vd4p2dnA@adelphia.com>, Robert <catcher@linuxmail.org> writes

>Phil Holland wrote:

>

>> In message <xwwvt0aoy3v9.8800b2ps37jl.dlg@40tude.net>, Andrew Thompson

>> <SeeMySites@www.invalid> writes

>>

>>> On Sun, 14 Mar 2004 20:03:51 +0000, Phil Holland wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>>> Environment:

>>>> Windows XP Pro SP1

>>>>

>>>> Have you rebooted since selecting the Sun JVM?

>>>>

>> Yes, and I've also tried adding/subtracting the JDK folder in the Path >> variable, but nothing has solved the problem yet.

>>Phil

> Go into the control panel. There is a Java applet and one of its options > is to set the JVM for IE.

I've already selected both IE and Netscape in the Java Plug-in applet in the Control Panel. However, I now have a suspicion that my recent install of Visual Studio 6.0, which installed a copy of MS JVM, may be the cause of my problems.

I'm still no closer to solving it though.

.....Phil

--

Holland Numerics Ltd
94 Green Drift, Royston, Herts SG8 5BT, UK
mobile : +44-(0)7714-279085
email : <NEWS@hollandnumerics.com>
URL : <http://www.hollandnumerics.com/>
