

Re: Java and avoiding software piracy?

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/Java/comp.lang.java.programmer/2007-07/msg02113.html>

- From: Twisted <twisted0n3@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 24 Jul 2007 00:04:33 -0000
-

On Jul 23, 7:42 am, Andreas Leitgeb <a...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Twisted <twisted...@xxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

If you disagree, and post a followup to that effect, please furnish evidence to support your position in the form of the name of a Usenet newsgroup that would constitute such an "appropriate forum". I will direct similar future material to said newsgroup if it meets the obvious criteria.

Even if there is no forum at all, where this would be on-topic, even then it is still offtopic here...

But if there is nowhere more on-topic to put it, then here is no worse than anyplace else, so it can't be wrong.

Just like you deny companies the "right" to make profit, we deny you the "right" to demand solutions for your problems for free.

You seem to forget that one and only one of those "rights" is enshrined in the constitution. Specifically, the First Amendment.