What capability? Computers do not do julian date calculations, applications do.

The capability to hold that much software, of course. They have a number of routines to fit in there, and there may well simply not have been enough room for the one that we are talking about. We are talking K's here, not M's or G's.

On the other hand, I don't know that; it is all speculation on my part based on a prior experience.
