Hi Everyone,

First off, I'm using PHP 5.2.0 and apache 1.3.33

I am trying to figure out what format a string is in in a database. It's a timecard system that I have found on-line and I am attempting to figure out how to write a script that would give me everyones timecard for the month on one screen I can print out for accounting to use. Below is an example of one of the lines in the database, What I'm really interested in is how it represents the "day".

user day job_name minutes sequence

root 1171774800 Production & technology Manager 990 3

I have not been able to find ANY info about that format, other then other people using it in blogs. I think I can figure out the rest as I go if I know how to decode the day. Any help or pointers to the "M" would be GREATLY appreciated! :)

Re: [PHP] Date/time format?

From The New Colossus, by Emma Lazarus

you stated in a different email that there are 6 possible values/settings for the sequence col.

what are they, and what do they mean?

One person asked about missed punches. What happens if someone forgets to clock out? Is an entry made for the person for the appropriate day/minutes/sequence ???

I can see a way to do what you are asking, but I need these questions answered first.
