

Re: Another PythonWin Excel question

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/Python/comp.lang.python/2005-01/0771.html>

From: It's me (itsme_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 01/06/05

Date: Thu, 06 Jan 2005 00:31:53 GMT

Ah, this work:

```
self.xlbook.Worksheets.Add(None,sht)
```

got it from:

<http://mail.python.org/pipermail/python-list/2003-September/183367.html>

Thanks again.

--

Me

```
"It's me" <itsme@yahoo.com> wrote in message
news:ou%Cd.8515$5R.6706@newssvr21.news.prodigy.com...
>
> "Kartic" <kartic.krishnamurthy@gmail.com> wrote in message > news:1104968382.403653.267060@f14g2000cwb.googlegroups.com...
> > I am not sure about this but I believe you can give a parameter > > after="sheet1". to Add(), like so, Add(after="sheet1").
> >
> >
> I get a "got an expected keyword argument 'after'" from Add().
> >
> > Unfortunately I do not have Excel installed on this machine to confirm > > this.
> >
> > A tip: if you have VBA (which you should if you have Excel) installed, > > lookup the Add method for the Worksheets collection. VBA will show the > > code completion, with all the arguments for the method call. Try the > > same for any of the methods.
> >
> >
> Yes, I read about that but unfortunately I have no experience with VBA at > all. :=(
>
> > Thanks,
> > --Kartic
> >
>
>
```