

Re: My buttons look different since I've upgraded to 8.4.4 (from 8.0)

Source: <http://coding.derkeiler.com/Archive/Tcl/comp.lang.tcl/2003-11/0397.html>

From: Chengye Mao (chengye.geo_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 11/09/03

Date: 8 Nov 2003 18:37:52 -0800

Donald Arseneau <asnd@triumf.ca> wrote in message news:<yfiwuaa5wlc.fsf@triumf.ca>...

> chengye.geo@yahoo.com (Chengye Mao) writes:

>

> > Changes of 3D shadow calculation were made in a function TkpGetShadows > > about three years ago for both Unix and Windows. The changes have an > > impact on all Tk widgets. So this is not a bug but some inconsistent

> > Tk widget looks in comparison with previous Tk 8.2 or below.

>

> Much longer before that, the color scheme was changed, and the tk_bisque > command provided for backward compatability. Is there a chance that > a command could help for this switch too?

>

> Donald Arseneau asnd@triumf.ca

The changes were made to distinguish shadows from either white or black background. Before Tk 8.3 a bright shadow is always brighter than the background color and a dark shadow darker than the background color. Unless the implementation is changed back, there is probably no chance for a Tcl command to do the switch.

Chengye Mao

<http://www.geocities.com/~chengye>